073 Static Decline The Stasis Arc

Perspective Fieldbook · https://kb.jeffreysummers.com/docs/073-static-decline-the-stasis-arc-2/

The Demand

Find your beat. Confident Drift, Externality Flare, the Split Question, the Reorientation Band, The Fork. Read the descriptions again and name which one you are standing in right now. Not the one you were in last year. Not the one you are afraid of. The one you are in today. Name it honestly, without softening it. Then ask one question: what would it cost me — in time, margin, or ego — to move to the next beat? That cost is the door. The door is not locked from the outside.

The Work

Read the beats and name which one you are standing in right now — not last year, not the one you fear, the one you're in today:
☐ Confident Drift — certain you're doing what a good operator does, while decline compounds underneath
☐ Externality Flare — something surfaced and you're deciding whether it's real
☐ The Split Question — is it outside or is it me?
☐ The Reorientation Band — actively re-examining
☐ The Fork — the decision point is here
Name it honestly, without softening it:
What would it cost you — time, margin, or ego — to move to the next beat?
That cost is the door. What you will do to walk through it: