The Demand

Tomorrow, name where you currently stand in the sequence — are you still defining the vision, or are you ready to build the physical manifestation of it? Perspective has to come before Product; the sequence isn't optional. Don't skip to building before you've actually decided what you're building toward.

The Work

Name where you currently stand in the sequence:
☐ Still defining the vision — Perspective work is not yet complete
☐ Ready to build the physical manifestation of it — Product work can begin
If you're still defining — what specifically is unresolved?
If you're ready to build — what vision are you building toward, in one sentence?
Where have you been tempted to skip ahead to building before deciding what you're building toward?
The one Perspective question you will finish answering before you take the next Product step:
