2295 The Workaraunt

Product Fieldbook · https://kb.jeffreysummers.com/docs/2295-the-workaraunt-2/

The Demand

Walk into your next shift running [The Read] the entire time, not just at the start and end. Watch for the tell of [The Workaraunt]: the room going mechanical, the cast landing interactions correctly but not warmly, the standard holding without the with. The moment you feel it, name it out loud and move — in the shift, not in the post-mortem. Catch it while there are still Guests in the room who came to feel something.

The Work

Describe the last shift where the mechanics ran clean but you sense Guests left processed rather than moved:

What tipped you off — the Read, a number, a feeling, nothing at all until now:

The Workaraunt Conundrum in your operation:

Name the competence your cast executes so well that it has started crowding out the emotional connection:

Is this a Road 1 identity problem or a shift-level condition you slipped into on an otherwise well-built operation:

Catching it in real time:

What specific signal will tell you, mid-shift, that the room has gone mechanical (name it, not "a feeling"):

What will you do the moment you catch that signal on your next shift — the exact move, not a general intention: